1933 Golden Rule Dahlias

The Largest and Best
in Cultivation

PATRONS are cordially invited to visit and inspect our flowers and all operations of our farm at any season. Located 3 1-2 miles north of Lebanon on the Lebanon-Dayton Pike, (Ohio No. 48) a direct route between Cincinnati and Dayton. We are 18 miles from Dayton and 33 miles from Cincinnati.

Old Fashioned Ideas

THE OLD fashioned notions of thrift and economy are coming into greater favor these days. A few years ago it seemed that they had been forgotten altogether. Work, planning, saving and pay-as-you-go methods bring big dividends.

“Sweet are the uses of adversity.” Although we do not want hard times we must admit that connected with them there is a cleansing and purifying influence by which the more worthwhile elements of humanity will greatly benefit.

There are saner elements entering into our life today than at the height of the 1929 boom period.

9th ANNUAL TABLE OF RATINGS—PRICE LIST and VARIETY INDEX

TO USE THE TABLE OF RATINGS—In the tabulation each large-flowered variety of Dahlia is rated on the scale of 100 points for perfection for six most important qualities. Pompons, Show and Miniature Dahlias are not rated. In the rating for Beauty, the variety is compared only with others of the same type and color. In arriving at the other ratings all large-flowered Dahlias are compared. For generally good and most reliable results, especially in a hot climate, we recommend the purchase only of those varieties which have a figure of merit of 85 or more. These will be your best investment. For certain specific purposes, some of those rating under 85 may be found excellent, especially in sheltered gardens, and in more favorable climates.

FD—Formal Decorative
 ID—Informal Decorative
 SC—Semi-Cactus
 Str. C—Straight Cactus
 Inc. C—Incurved Cactus

Varieties with Figure of Merit of 85 or more are printed in black face type.

Golden Rule Introductions for 1933

RED-HEAD, Miniature. One to two inch flower of bright scarlet orange, facing up and opening like a rose. Bushes are dwarf, free branching, early, continuous and profuse in bloom. We have had a bowl filled about every four days with these exquisite, small flowers in our dining room from late July till November 1st.

Roots $1.50, 3 for $3.75; Plants $.75, 3 for $1.90

BLUEBIRD, Miniature. A distinctly bluish purple or deep bluish lavender, 1½ to 2½ inches. Formal Decorative ball-shaped, and with an extra long stem. Dwarf and with habit identical with Red-Head. A bowl of Blue Bird makes an unusual and distinctive showing. Same price as Red-Head.

Special Offer—3 green plants of each of the above two new miniatures for $3.75; 3 roots of each for $7.50.

Other 1933 Introductions

These new dahlias have not been field grown by us, and therefore cannot be rated.

AMELIA EARHART. The sensation of most of the Eastern shows this year and at the head of Mr. Hart's 1932 Honor Roll. In view of this record in an unfavorable dahlia season Amelia Earhart gets a good start toward becoming a great dahlia. Blooms were shown 12 by 8 inches. The huge flower is a beautiful coral semi-cactus. Strong Plants $7.50 each

LA FIESTA. Another new Honor Roll variety, an informal decorative, 11 x 7 inches, a bicolor that will be welcomed by all dahlia fans. Yellow, penciled red.....Strong Plants $5.00 each

FULL MOON, I. D. This monster yellow is said to be the largest yet introduced. It is a clear golden yellow and has been a sensation wherever shown, being one of the outstanding dahlias of the past season, when it was introduced. It was not, however, put upon the Honor Roll until this season. Strong Plants $5.00 each

PALO ALTO, S. C. This is also on Mr. Hart's Honor Roll. A well-formed, big bloom of bright salmon.....Strong Plants $10.00 each

WHITE WONDER, I. D. A very meritorious, large, pure white flower, similar in size and form to Fort Monmouth. An Honor Roll variety. Strong Plants $7.50 each

DAHLIA SEED

Mixed, large flowered, $2.50 per 100.

BUCKEYE BRIDE (HR). 1930 Formal Decorative. One of the very few truly great Dahlias as its performance all over the country testifies. The color is geranium pink, shading to soft salmon. The flowers are 5 to 10 inches in diameter and when matured nearly as deep. The stems are unusually long, varying from one to two feet to the first pair of leaves. What is most important is that all the flowers are held correctly on the stem. The blooms mature from the bud in less than one-half the usual time. This gives it a wonderful advantage over other varieties. The blooms keep well when cut and are best when cut young.

During 1931 and 1932 we had the most successful cutflower year, due to Buckeye Bride. From 25%-50% of all dahlias cut were from this variety, which cut ten times as many flowers per plant as any other. Owing to its great beauty and fine stems it sold readily. A single block of green plants produced constantly for 17½ and 12 consecutive weeks. We grew Buckeye Bride in the greenhouse during the winter and spring and again in the late autumn from August planting. It is the best dahlia for greenhouse culture we have tried.

The foliage has a distinct bluish green, or glaucous tint and is heavy, leathery and insect resistant. For combined beauty and general productiveness no other dahlia of any color has equaled it.....Plants .75—Roots $1.50

BUCKEYE PEACH. Formal Decorative. This forms an almost globular flower, in which are blended wax yellow and peach red, with centre of peach red. Flowers are full to centre the whole season and will average 6 inches by 4 to 5 deep. They keep long when cut. They are held at the best angle on always stiff stems of average length. This variety produces perfect flowers in hot weather and is a free flowering sort. Medium in height.....Plants $1.00—Roots $2.00

CARMANIA. A long lasting gold flower on a very long perfect stem. Roots .50

CHAMPOEG. One of the newer and large type dahlias that everyone likes and wants. Flowers 10 by 4 inches. Very freely produced on perfect stems of good length. Miniatures—Very small Decorative blooms.

Roots of all varieties are $.50 each except where otherwise priced.

AMBER QUEEN, Pom. Amber and scarlet.

GARDEN LOVE, Min. Old Rose.

GOOD LUCK, Min. Bright Orange.

HONEY. Pom. Orange Amber. A free, early, recontinuous flowering sort. All flowers less than 2 inches.

BUCKEYE JR., Min. Brilliant bronzy rose.

JOHNNIE, Pom. Dark red. Very small and perfect.

KLEIN DOMITEA, Pom. Orange.

LITTLE MAY, Pom. Yellow.

SNOWCLAD, Pom. White.

SUNBEAM, Pom. Red.

LITTLE JEWEL, Min. Pink.

RED-HEAD. New orange scarlet miniature (see page 11) Plants .75—Roots $1.50

BLUEBIRD. New bluish lavender miniature (see page 11) Plants .75—Roots $1.50

MT. WHITNEY SUNSET. New.....Plants $1.00—Roots $2.00

Cultural Directions

Best Planting Time for Dahlias in Ohio—May 1st to June 15th.

WE ARE convinced that the three most important rules for successfully growing Dahlias in a normal soil are: (1) Have the soil well drained. (2) Do not over-fertilize. The use of nitrates or of too much manure from barnyard or hencoop may give good results one season and result the following season in little or no flowers and loss of roots. The people who not only grow good flowers from Dahlia Roots, but also keep them over winter are those who fertilize moderately. A soil too rich in nitrogen also seems to favor the growth of insect pests that today are the greatest menace to all plant life. (3) Supply humus yearly to your soil. Rye sowed after dahlias are dug and plowed under in April is a good source of humus. Any other decayed vegetable matter will also serve the purpose.

Planting

A MEDIUM to smallish root makes the best clump. Cut away the tail half of a very large root before planting. Plant the root horizontally when the ground is dry enough, not less than three and one-half feet apart, four inches deep in heavy soil and five to six inches in light soil. A stake should be driven in before planting. Cover the roots, firming well. The plant should appear within a month, if not, investigate and if blind (no sprout) notify the one from whom you purchased the root. Cultivate early and often until the plants show buds, then start fertilizing and disbudding. Much harm is sometimes done by cultivating deeply after plants start blooming. The fibrous root system comes close to the surface of the ground and deep cultivation cuts these roots, thus weakening the growth of the plant. After blooming starts, cultivation should not much more than scratch the surface.

Water only when urgently needed and then soak to a good depth. In case of drought after August 1st mulch with straw, peat moss, or other litter between plants to conserve soil moisture. In a clay soil use winter's coal ashes and mix well before planting.

Fertilizing

IN GENERAL it is not wise to fertilize dahlias at planting. In case this is done take care that fertilizer does not come into contact with or near to the tuber or plant.

First plant in good productive soil. Second see that the soil contains each season a good proportion of humus. Rye sowed each fall after dahlias are dug and spaded or plowed under when of suitable height in the spring will liven the soil and provide some humus. Well rotted manure is good and should be applied in March or April and later plowed under.

Avoid all chemical fertilizers. Be sure to use the old fashioned mixed type of commercial fertilizers. This should be applied starting in July at two week intervals, spreading between the plants and raking or cultivating into the top soil. Twenty-five pounds per season for 100 dahlias is about right. Bone meal and wood ashes mixed with the fertilizer is excellent.

For run down soil we recommend rotted manure and the fertilizer top dressings as described above. Fresh manure of any kind should never be used.

Disbudding

VERY few varieties have natural stems long enough for cut flowers. If you want plenty of fine cut flowers for the market, home or exhibition, disbudding is very important. Start from the top and work down, don't start disbudding at the base of the plant. When in June, July or August the plants first show flower buds at the top, select a vigorous bud which you wish to bloom, then take off the side buds and shoots on the first two or three joints down from the selected bud. Before this bud will have developed into a flower, other branches will have grown up from beneath and will be ready to disbud. Continue to disbud faithfully and it will repay you with more and better and larger flowers throughout the season. Most of the varieties we offer in this catalogue will naturally produce large flowers without disbudding, but if not disbudded the later flowers may become smaller and with open centers. With faithful disbudding a constant succession of nice large blooms will be had. Cut off the old blooms as soon as the backs become unsightly. This stimulates the plant to produce new buds more rapidly and promptly.

Storing of Dahlia Roots

SOME folks have trouble keeping their roots over winter, and sometimes lose some. Others have no trouble at all. We believe that the greatest loss of roots is caused by their becoming too greatly dried on the day they are dug and during the first few days or weeks after digging. We recommend that they be not dug too soon after an early frost. November 1st is normally soon enough. Watch the weather and if dry postpone digging for a while. If abnormally heavy rains start after frost, dig to avoid possible root rot on poorly drained soil.

Call on us at digging time and see how we do it. It may pay you. A few lose their roots because of poor methods of digging and do not realize it.

It is not necessary to cut the tops off before digging. Dig carefully around the Dahlia plants, finally removing each clump with a good ball of earth. Cut the stem off short and dust it well with powdered sulphur or sulphur containing a little lime. Do not expose the roots for any length of time to a drying wind or sun. Prompt action in following these directions may prevent loss of roots. Store preferably in a cool basement near the floor but not in a wet place. If basement is warm, store roots as far away from heat as possible and protect the clumps by packing in peat moss, sand, ashes, leaves, or sawdust and cover the whole container well, placing it as near the floor as possible. A little sulphur mixed with packing material is good to prevent mildew. The container should be large enough to hold the clumps together with four to six inches of packing on each side, underneath and on the top.

If one has a successful method of storing Dahlia roots, we do not recommend changing. Inspection of the roots at weekly intervals during November and December will often enable one to anticipate loss.

Insects Which You May Meet

THE Dahlia has its insect enemies. Fortunately gardens in town are nearly all so sheltered that the Dahlias are not subject to many insect pests. However a few gardens may be adjacent to open fields, weed patches, etc., and these in certain seasons may be troubled with insects. A brief description of the more important follows:

Red Spider—The familiar greenhouse pest. With weekly rains or vigorous spraying, there will be no trouble from red spider. They attack in warm dry weather and the plants have the appearance of being burned by heat. The remedy is a vigorous water spray directed on the leaves.

Tarnish Plant Beetle—A soft shelled beetle about 1-16 inch long, greenish gray brown in color, quick to fly when disturbed. A sucking insect. Attacks the stems of young buds and shoots and is the greatest single cause of blasted Dahlia buds. Remedy: One of the several pyrethrum sprays. (The food of sucking insects cannot be poisoned).

Leaf Hopper—A tiny greenish white sucking insect, 1-32 inch long, quick to fly when disturbed. Attacks all parts of the growing Dahlia and causes wrinkles or mottled foliage. Remedy: Pyrethrum or nicotine sprays.

Black Aster Beetle—A round bodied, black beetle, from $\frac{1}{4}$ to $\frac{1}{2}$ inch long, small head; flies during heat of day from July 15th until September 1st, on sunshiny days only. A chewing insect that attacks only the flower petals. Best remedy is to remove beetles from flowers into kerosene at the hours of 11:00 A. M., 2 and 4:00 P. M. They are also quickly killed by pyrethrum sprays.

Crop Rotation

THE successful farmer rotates his crops. Many commercial Dahlia Growers do not, but grow Dahlias for many years on the same field with excellent results. They rely on intelligent and thorough fertilizing, and continue to raise good Dahlias year after year. However, we believe, that the rotation of a legume crop will be found beneficial with Dahlias for at least two seasons out of six or seven. If this is not possible the maintenance of humus or decayed vegetable matter in the soil is imperative.

How to Exhibit at the Dahlia Shows

In order to win prizes at a Dahlia Show one must have fine Dahlias. Therefore the time to prepare is now. Get in touch with a good reliable grower and select the best varieties for exhibiting. Medium size dahlias are very lovely indeed, but at a show most people see only the large ones. So select the large flowered varieties. You will be very wise too if you have at least three plants of a kind. If you have only one of each variety it may not be in bloom at the time you are going to need it, so as an extra insurance select more than one of a variety.

Then comes the fun—planting the precious roots or plants and watching them grow—caring for them all summer and helping them over the rough places in life. For the rain doesn't always fall when you want it to, and often the sun gets very hot and the winds will blow a gale. And the dahlia plant is a good deal like we ourselves; it responds so quickly to a little kindness. But at last cool nights come and with them the shows.

A couple of days before the show you are positive, "you wont have a thing." But you will. You will have some lovely flowers. You always do. And anyway one has to take the best that he has in order to make the show a success. If the elements have been especially hard on you, you may be sure they are not just picking on you alone. Others will be in the same boat. So you will go out the evening before the show or in the early morning and cut your flowers. Put them in your cellar in clean glass jars, or clean crocks, deep in cool clear water.

At the show examine the entries very carefully. Be sure that each flower is entered in the proper class. If class A calls for the best six or more decoratives any color, and you have ten, but four of them are not so very extra, use only the six. If class B calls for best twenty-five, be sure that your basket or vase is large enough to display them properly. Don't crowd them. If class C calls for the best vase of poms and you have a dozen, but three of them are rather large—use only the tiny ones. For quality is what they are after in a show. Arrange all your flowers first as carefully and as calmly as you can. Don't let it make you nervous and tired. Then when you are all finished go over your entries again and look at each one with the eye of the judge. Maybe you will see something wrong with it. Perhaps that single specimen isn't in the right kind of a vase and maybe your poms are lovely, but need to be displayed in a larger bowl, they are not artistic. It might be that you have left a bud on that looks as though it might wilt in a short ime. Buds do that. Perhaps there is too much foliage on an entry.

Well now you have done your best. Your flowers are all arranged and entered in their proper classes. And now right here comes the most important part of exhibiting at a Fall Show. If you have won you will be pleased and happy. If you haven't won, be glad that the other fellow won. Your flowers were wonderful, you got a lot of fun out of it, and believe it or not, a dahlia show is one of the most thrilling and exhilarating experiences of life.
